

ARCHITECTURAL DIGEST

THE INTERNATIONAL DESIGN AUTHORITY

APRIL 2011

THE POWER OF PLACE

8 Extraordinary
Homes

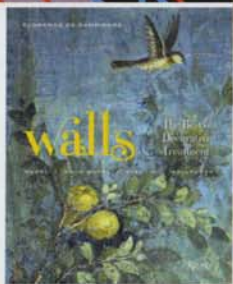

PLUS:

What's New in Rome
The Hybrid to Drive Now
AD Visits Vidal Sassoon

archdigest.com

Head to the Web for more great homes, discoveries, resources

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP: Department of Water and Power [Los Angeles], a 2001 painting by Sarah Morris. Richard Neutra's Kaufmann House, photographed by Julius Shulman. A sophisticated study by Thomas Pheasant. A contemporary home in Austin, Texas, designed by Peter Gluck. Florence de Dampierre's new book, Walls.

AN ARTIST'S EYE

Sarah Morris (see page 46) finds inspiration in everything from paper clips to high-rise buildings to sprawling cities. AD takes an extended online look at her body of work, which encompasses paintings, films, and site-specific installations. archdigest.com/go/morris

A NEUTRA TRIBUTE

In honor of this month's story on the Richard Neutra-designed home of Vidal Sassoon (see page 70), AD revisits important residences by the architect, whose contribution to California Modernism was immeasurable. Among those on view: the instantly recognizable Kaufmann House in Palm Springs and Lovell House in Los Angeles. archdigest.com/go/neutra

SURFACE SOURCEBOOK

Our slide show of highlights from Walls, a new book by Florence de Dampierre (Rizzoli, $60), provides a photographic guide to the best decorative coverings and treatments. See how murals, wood paneling, wallpaper, and stenciling can transform a space. archdigest.com/go/walls

CHAT ROOM

AD Special Projects Editor Mitchell Owens talks with New York-based architect Peter Gluck (see page 98) about his philosophy, the 39-year history of his firm, and what he's learned over the course of his career. Plus, we round up some of his best structures to date. archdigest.com/go/gluck

WORK ORDER

A good home office eliminates clutter and promotes productivity, but the best ones inspire great thinking—and do so with style. As proof, peruse our picks of extraordinary work spaces—from a minimalist computer station to a Deco-influenced study. archdigest.com/go/homeoffices